Church Membership: Or the Conditions of New Testament and Methodist Church Membership Examined and Compared (Classic Reprint) S. Bond

Excerpt from Church Membership: Or the Conditions of New Testament and Methodist Church Membership Examined and Compared

It is a common and natural desire when a man appears before the public in the printed page, to explain the reasons. The Author of this essay has written and published, because of the pressure of a conviction that the subject of it needs to be studied by the people of the Church to which he belongs. He has marked with regret a disposition to ignore the importance of Christian fellowship to the individual Christian; and he has heard many statements as to the relation which it bears to the proper conditions of Church membership, which he believes were made through misconception of what the New Testament teaches on this subject. The views thus expressed tend very directly to make those who hold them feel that the conditions of membership in the Methodist Church are purely arbitrary; and in their application necessarily exclude some who have a right to membership, according to their ideas.
