In this book, we will consider that the reader is well acquainted with the terminology of astrology & knows what the horoscope or chart is & how to set it up. In the text of each chapter however we shall cite this writer's textbooks as reference if required by the student for the mathematics & rules, etc. which underlie the work in hand. When we know the principles involved we are equipped to better understand the scriptures we are reading. We should remember that a person's birth chart is his pattern & promise of what is to be. From that first moment they both move forward together, so that we set up a progressed chart for each year & therein see how that promise is being fulfilled by the picture of his progress shown by the planets & cusps in the new places they have reached, because they are his scriptural representatives to be read. What we aim to do first is to delineate (read) the natal chart & thus weigh the native's qualifications, his good points & his shortcomings as well as his opportunities & whether he will take advantage of them or be blind to them. Beginners should know the keywords for the planets & aspects as well as the general terminology (p. 189) making delineation easier & more certain in every case. (pg. 1)
