Volunteer firefighting paramedic Robert J. Doyle and his crew are back again. He is still struggling with his inner demons, the result of an incident in war-torn Lebanon, when he ordered the destruction of a complete village. As he walked through the carnage, Doyle vowed one day to pay for the loss of so many innocent lives. Doyle, still believes with each life he helps save; he makes a payment on his debt to God and mankind. As Doyle responds to his community's calls for help, he ignores his own personal needs. To counteract flashbacks brought on by PTSD and from burnout as a result of his nonstop service to the public, Doyle continues to use alcohol to keep going in his endeavor to save more lives and property.
